THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON.

TUESDAY ...... February 19, 1895 CROSBY S. NOYES ...... Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation much more than the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

IIn order to avoid delays, on account of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Departments, according to tenor or purpose

Knowing how deeply interested the people of the District of Columbia are in the water supply which daily becomes less adequate, and satisfied that Congress needs in such a matter but little prodding to do including members of Congress-shall petinational legislature to retain in the District of Columbia appropriation bill the provision which will, if it becomes law, result in the raising of the dam at Great Falls and considerable increase in the city's water supply. For some time past there has been so little of water pressure that in some portions of the city there has been absence of the necessary grows steadily and unless the water supises at least as rapidly it will not he long before there will be shortage even levels within the city limits. Col. George H. Elliot, the engineer officer in obligations. He is not anxious to pose as charge of the Washington Aqueduct, says a statesman, a world's reformer, a thinker "We are bound to have a water famine. with a theory on the financial question, a There is no escape from it. I simply want socialist or anarchist, if that posing will to anticipate the inevitable and shorten injure in any way his material interests as the ordeal if possible. The water famine a taxpayer, a citizen, and the head and is already upon us. It can only increase, and it will continue to increase with an inthe workingmen to look to their leaders, creasing ratio every summer and winter and to see that the wage-earners suffer no until the raising of the dam is completed." discredit and injury from the vagaries of This statement and a vast quantity of more technically-shaped information was before both the House and Senate committees on appropriations. The House committee and the House decided that the proper thing to do would be to appropriate the sum of $125,000 with which to raise the dam to the necessary height. The Senate committee and the Senate concluded that further investigation ought to be had, and striking out the $125,000 item put in its place provision for a $10,000 investigation, which, by the way, could not possibly add one drop to the water furnished nor a material fact to the information already displayed before the public gaze by the engineer officers who have studied our water supply. Under the most favorable circumstances water consumers would not receive any benefit from the dam-raising operation until the latter part of next year; set an investigation going and there must be at least another year of delay and consequent suffering without any compensating advantage. With this extremely grave situation facing this community, a correspondent, who feels assured that agitation has in it great possibilities for good, suggested to The Star the printing of a petition blank and the forwarding of the filled coupons to Congress. The idea assumes shape today, and before noon tomorrow there should be in The Star office many thousands of responses. It is essential that the work be done speedily, for the condecision as to this most important matter before the close of the present week. Citizens who are continually annoyed by the inexcusable water shortage should see to it with all haste that their own petitions and those of their neighbors are turned in at the earliest possible moment: citizens who have not as yet been brought into personal contact with the lack of the most essential of liquids should sympathize practically with their less fortunate fellowbeings and should bear in mind that unless there is immediate application of the remedy for which The Star now makes demand, they, too, will soon suffer and be compelled to complain. The petition coupon will be found upon the second page of The Star at least today and tomorrow. There ought not to be an uncut copy of The Star in Washington tonight.

It is an interesting fact that ex-Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania, who today is a candidate for mayoralty honors in Philadelphia, will not be able to vote either for himself or for any one else at the election in which he must necessarily be so deeply concerned. There is provision of law as to the length of residence in Philadelphia necessary to suffrage qualification and this provision the ex-governor is unable to comply with. There is something paradoxical in the legal condition which permits a man to be a candidate for office in a community where he at the same time is forbidden the common privilege of the fran-

There were seventy-four men employed upon the new city post-office building today. There is cause for gratification in the gradual growth of the force, but the increase is so slow that to hope for completion of the structure at any time prior to August 17, 1996, is to display a more than ordinarily sanguine disposition. Since the date of construction was commenced, two years, eleven months and twenty-seven days have been lost forever, yet the framework of the third story is still composed

Mr. John R. McLean may have allowed himself to be overbid for a box at the opera, but no one has come within sight of him as a contributor for the relief of the poor. His noble gift of $5,000 for the poor of Washington stands away ahead on the list, as the contribution of a single indi-

Elsewhere in The Star the vice president of the Federation of Labor suggests that in imputing a certain policy to some of the local labor leaders The Star has put the lashows conclusively in a note appended to this communication, that if any one has put the local workingmen in a false attitude It is Master Workman Simmons, who declared that "last year the labor organizations petitioned Congress to let the District have $800,000 of its own surplus revesewers, even if it was not duplicated from the Treasury." One of the greatest drawbacks to the effectiveness of organizations for the promotion of the inof the workingmen is the frequency with which the idiosyncrasies of individual leaders put the wage-earners in a false attitude. In Washington, as in other cities, the workingmen are reasonably desirous of conditions which shall assure them ample work; which shall improlong the lives of themselves and families, and which shall increase their pay and their hours of labor in order that through an accumulation of money and leisure time the opportunity may be had of full intellectual and mora! development. From its birth The Star has fought the battles of the people of the District for material, mental and moral betterment. very proposition that promise the welfare of the local workingmen has been upheld by it, and many have been originated by it, and made effective through its vigorous championship. Today the local labor organizations are, through the acts and words of some of their leadindifference to the maintenance of the 50 Latest quotations in the foreign count market indicate that prices are firm with a tendency to go higher.

themselves against overwhelming public sentiment and The Star, and weakening their credit and the effectiveness of their abors when they come to struggle for some specific measure which directly promotes their material interests. The recent reasoning against interest-bearing bonds and the credit system, uttered in the name of the local labor organizations, would, if carried to its logical results, overturn the practice of the financial world. Theorists in the field of political economy, so-called advanced thinkers in social science, and the whole brood of socialists, anarchists and eranks, may, without damage, deliver themselves of their ideas, if there is public recognition of the fact that they speak as individuals and only for themselves. But if, representing the workingman in some official capacity, they circulate these cpinions in his name they do him an injury and they do him an injustice. For the wage-earner of the District does not separate himself from other citizens and invite or express indifference concerning Uncle Sam's repudiation of national obligations to the capital-a repudiation which would be fully as disastrous to him as to anybody else. He is not a single-taxer and he does not request Congress to make of the capital an apothecaries' cat upon which each dubious experiment in political economy may be conducted, by legislators who would not dare to propose the dose to their home constituencies. He is not anxious to abolish credit and interest-bearing obligations and revolutionize the entire financial system. It may be that he belongs to a building association, and in that or some other way has wisely borrowed money to build his home; in which case he would not care to stultify himself by a general assault on the principle of interest-bearing theorists uttered in the name of labor. A few trustful Washingtonians seem to be really surprised because the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company has not come to the assistance of the District authorities in the work of smashing the ice in the river, and of thus reducing the probabilities of the damage-working flood which is now threatened. It is possible, of course, that the Commissioners imagined that the cempany would make a favorable reply to the request sent it, but the chances are that they, knowing well the corporation with which they have to deal, sent the invitation to co-operate merely for politeness sake. It is true that but for the obstructions offered by the Long bridge there would be no necessity for the expensive ce-smashing which has to be done much too frequently, but such a minor consideration as that could not be expected to move the company to the expenditure of any of the company's money.

States, and are also made to appear as

As to the Supervising Architect.

If Mr. Carrers had accepted the appointment offered him by the Secretary of the Treasury he might have inflicted a serious setback on this measure (the McKaig bill) of real reform. As it is, his letter calls attention to the present irrational and demoralizing system, which commits what ought to be among the most important architectural works of the country to inarchitectural works of the country to in-competent hands, and promotes extravagance in expenditure, as well as inartistic and inconvenient structures.
